The piece won the Gustav Holst Prizes for music in 1965, and was revived in 1967 and in 1972. Composition The work is dedicated to Mozart, who died in 1791. Tippett saw the scene of Mozart's funeral as an allegory of the Last Judgment, which is the theme of the piece. First performance The work was first performed at the Wigmore Hall, London, on 3 March 1964 by the BBC Symphony Orchestra conducted by Bernard Haitink.
